Motivation

The willingness to try and to learn something new is what I expected from my students. Language is about communication and engagement. The Input should be reciprocal. For me, a classroom is where we exchange idea and learn from each other and that's how we will together built an interactive classroom. Learning German can open up doors to a new world, and it's never too late to start!

“To have another language is to possess a second soul.” – Charlemagne

Motivation

- I work with CPG, seeing that I would like be a part of the support, which encourages and motivates students to study in Germany or German-speaking country, by getting them closer to these countries through German language. When ones learn a language, not only the language but also the culture, tradition, way of thinking, and many others are transferred and perceived. Since the Thai law originates partly from the German law, I strongly believe, German language is one of the necessary foreign languages to learn, in order to understand the law even more. When I teach, motivation, active participation and enthusiasm are expected, because it is the key to make the teaching and learning success and the students would enjoy the class as well. The students will also have fun with many different teaching methods and strategies and also have opportunities to practice their German language skill with various kinds of communicative simulation situations.

Motivation

- In my German classes, I try to assist students to reach their individual aims in learning the language. These aims may differ due to the individual background of students, as well as their level of proficiency, and career perspectives. I admire my students for their stamina to dedicate their precious spare time to language learning. However, once enrolled in the course, they are expected to be present on time, and to be well-prepared.
